Episode 3	Man's Best Friend?	On January 4, 1989, 4-year-old April Renee Tucker was found bleeding profusely from a severe leg wound in the backyard of her Emory, Texas home. She was hospitalized and pronounced dead shortly after arrival. Her mother Debbie Loveless and step-father John Harvey Miller told police that she was attacked by neighborhood dogs. Investigators did not agree and believed that April's wounds were not dog bites, but slashing injuries, consistent with knife wounds. John and Debbie were found guilty of murder and sentenced to life in prison. Five years later, a forensic scientist saw something in the crime scene photographs that had been missed the first time around. Episode 4	Hand Delivered	In 1995, police in San Diego, California are baffled by a pair of hands found in a dumpster. Through further investigation, they determine that the hands are those of missing person Don Hardin. With this knowledge, the police focus on local homeless man Dale Whitmer, who had lived with Hardin around the time of his disappearance. However, they can find no forensic evidence on Whitmer, and the case goes cold. About one year later, investigators receive an anonymous letter with information about the crime that had been withheld from the press —information only the killer (or someone close to the killer) would know. Laser technology helps to identify the address from where the anonymous letter was mailed, which leads them to Mormon Bishop Mark Davis. Davis cites the privilege between clergy and church member as a reason to not disclose the source of the information, but a judge rules that since Davis sent the letter, he must identify the source. Episode 10	Church Disappearance	On November 10, 1981, six-year-old Cassie Hansen disappeared from her St. Paul, Minnesota church during an evening service. After a tip from a witness that an older man was seen carrying a small body, Cassie's body was found in a dumpster the next day. The FBI created a psychological profile of the perpetrator but were still unable to find the killer. Dorothy Noga contacted police to let them know that Stuart Knowlton was a massage client that liked to discuss his fantasies during his weekly massages and that one fantasy he spoke of closely resembled the church abduction, which caught her attention. Knowlton had also asked Noga to be his alibi on the night of the murder. Even though she was later attacked by Knowlton and stabbed 32 times, Noga testified against Knowlton in the trial. Knowlton died in prison in 2006.	Matt 2:18 "A voice is heard in Ramah, weeping and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children and refusing to be comforted, because they are no more." Rathbun claims Sobek died during a consensual sexual encounter gone wrong, but Sobek's corpse and some high tech digital imagery tell a more sinister story. Upon initial investigation, it appeared to be an accidental fire, but lies, greed, and medical trickery can't match the skills of forensic scientists, who bring the curtain down on Stephen's killer, his cheating wife Kimberly Hricko, who is convicted of his murder. After her death, Shannon's family reported to police their suspicions that Davis seemed far from grief-stricken. Upon further investigation, it was discovered that Davis had poisoned Shannon with succinylcholine, an anaesthetic drug used to induce paralysis. After several years evading justice, Davis was finally arrested in American Samoa in 1989, having found work as a pilot. A more thorough DNA analysis conducted later, this time including blood from his finger and a hair sample, revealed a match. In court, Schneeberger revealed how he had beaten the DNA test: he had inserted a plastic tube filled with the blood of another patient into his left arm. The blood tested in his earlier DNA test was taken from that tube. He was found guilty of sexual assault and obstructing justice and sentenced to 6 years in prison. ## Mistaken for Dead

In 1988, when a patient identified as Gene Hanson dies unexpectedly in the office of neurologist Dr. Richard Boggs, police in Glendale, California begin what they think will be a routine investigation. What they find throws doubt on the time of death and the identity of Hanson and raises questions about the doctor's role in his death. Episode 19	Pure Evil	Creating a profile of a serial killer, is part science and part intuition. The science involves studying criminals who have committed similar crimes, to see what characteristics they all have in common. One common trait among serial killers, is a past history of abusing animals. In the 1993 search for the killer of two teenagers, Brian King and Christina Benjamin, in Telico, Texas, a behavioral profile led to suspect Jason Massey—and hard science proved the profile was correct. Massey was executed by lethal injection on April 3, 2001. Episode 20	Root of all Evil	In 1981, Charlotte Grabbe, wife of prominent Marshall, Illinois farmer Fred Grabbe, disappeared from her farm without a trace. For three years, investigators searched in vain for any trace of Charlotte. Eventually, Fred Grabbe's former lover came forward with a fantastic tale of rage, murder, mutilation and cremation, but there seemed to be no way to test the validity of her story. That is, until a plant pathologist and a dendrochronologist conducted some tests on the plant life where the cremation supposedly occurred, which led to a surprising revelation.	Luke 17: 31 In that day, he which shall be upon the housetop, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back	The Job of the President is to hire investigators to trace her past web.
Episode 21	Where the Blood Drops	When someone dies under mysterious circumstances, the spouse almost always is a suspect—especially if they are in bed, sleeping beside the individual at the time of their death. In 1987, Susie Mowbray was charged for her husband Bill Mowbray's death in Brownsville, Texas, which had the appearance of suicide. Her son was so convinced of her innocence that he enrolled in law school, studied all of the evidence and, eventually, discovered the truth of what really happened that fateful night between his mother and father.	Luke 17: 32 Remember Lot's wife	The Job of the President is to Pursue criminal charges against fathers of people of Allah whenever traces of their blood are found around us.

Frozen Evidence

In 1992, two masked gunmen enter the home of Ward and Diana Maracle in Tyendinaga Mohawk Territory, Ontario to rob them, but Ward was shot in the head. This is the story of one investigator, whose quick thinking and knowledge of science enabled him to capture a shoe impression made in snow before the evidence melted away. Knowledge of the shoe led investigators to Peter Benedict and Frank Lanoue, who were convicted of aggravated assault and robbery.

Luke 24:4-8 NIV 4 As they stood there puzzled, two men suddenly appeared to them, clothed in dazzling robes. 5 The women were terrified and bowed with their faces to the ground. The medical examiner not only identified the cause of death but also found an important clue. It was a signature element of a murder committed by Lemuel Smith 10 years earlier, which was also investigated by the medical examiner. ## Soft Touch

In March 1990, 22-year-old Dawn Bruce was raped, sodomized, and murdered in her Henrico County, Virginia apartment. The killer left very little evidence, but investigators did notice a blood smear on a pillow case that appeared to have been made by one of the killer's fingers.

New technology enabled investigators to identify a fingerprint from the cloth surface of the pillow case. This gave police the means to apprehend Robert Douglas Knight.

Matthew 27:1–10, Judas betrayed Jesus to the Sanhedrin in the Garden of Gethsemane, in exchange for 30 pieces of silver, by kissing him on the cheek and addressing him as "master" to reveal his identity in the darkness to the crowd who had come to arrest him.[2] In modern times, his name is often used synonymously with betrayal or treason.

Church Disappearance

On November 10, 1981, six-year-old Cassie Hansen disappeared from her St. Paul, Minnesota church during an evening service. After a tip from a witness that an older man was seen carrying a small body, Cassie's body was found in a dumpster the next day. The FBI created a psychological profile of the perpetrator but were still unable to find the killer. Dorothy Noga contacted police to let them know that Stuart Knowlton was a massage client that liked to discuss his fantasies during his weekly massages and that one fantasy he spoke of closely resembled the church abduction, which caught her attention. Knowlton had also asked Noga to be his alibi on the night of the murder. Even though she was later attacked by Knowlton and stabbed 32 times, Noga testified against Knowlton in the trial. Knowlton died in prison in 2006.

Bad Blood

In 1992, in Kipling, Saskatchewan, Dr. John Schneeberger is accused of sedating and sexually assaulting one of his female patients and his step-daughter. DNA tests demonstrate that the doctor is innocent, but the female patient still insists that he sedated and raped her. On three occasions, blood was taken from the doctor's arm for DNA testing, and each time, the results exonerated Schneeberger. Seven years later, a private investigator takes lip balm from Schneeberger's car and has it DNA-tested, and the results were a match to the perpetrator. A more thorough DNA analysis conducted later, this time including blood from his finger and a hair sample, revealed a match. In court, Schneeberger revealed how he had beaten the DNA test: he had inserted a plastic tube filled with the blood of another patient into his left arm. The blood tested in his earlier DNA test was taken from that tube. He was found guilty of sexual assault and obstructing justice and sentenced to 6 years in prison.

Schneeberger had his medical license revoked and was subsequently deported to his native
South Africa.

Pure Evil

Creating a profile of a serial killer, is part science and part intuition. The science involves studying criminals who have committed similar crimes, to see what characteristics they all have in common. One common trait among serial killers, is a past history of abusing animals. In the 1993 search for the killer of two teenagers, Brian King and Christina Benjamin, in Tellico, Texas, a behavioral profile led to suspect Jason Massey—and hard science proved the profile was correct. Massey was executed by lethal injection on April 3, 2001.

In 1981, Charlotte Grabbe, wife of prominent Marshall, Illinois farmer Fred Grabbe, disappeared from her farm without a trace. For three years, investigators searched in vain for any trace of Charlotte. Eventually, Fred Grabbe's former lover came forward with a fantastic tale of rage, murder, mutilation and cremation, but there seemed to be no way to test the validity of her story. That is, until a plant pathologist and a dendrochronologist conducted some tests on the plant life where the cremation supposedly occurred, which led to a surprising revelation.

Treading Not So Lightly

In 1980, 4-year-old Vicky Lyons is found unconscious in a Big Spring, Texas parking lot with severe head trauma. Police concluded it was a hit-and-run vehicle accident and left it at that. But Vicky's mother Crystal suspected there was more to the story and was determined to find out exactly what had happened. Being a fan of murder mysteries and forensic science shows, Crystal used much of what she had learned to determine who was responsible for the accident, which permanently injured her daughter.

Devon left their Limerick, Pennsylvania home to go shopping in Collegeville, Pennsylvania but didn't return home at the expected time. Lisa's husband Jimmy called police to report their disappearance, and he directed them to a nearby shopping center. Later that day, Devon's body was found dumped off of a roadside, but there was no sign of Lisa. Looking further into the store that Lisa had said that she was going to, police shift their focus to store employee Caleb Fairley.
